Cultural Policy and Governance

Policy and Cultural Studies Elective - Winter 2010

BCULST 589/BPOLST 593/ HUM 595A: Topics in Cultural/Policy Studies: Cultural Policy and Governance

Wednesday, 5:45-10:05 PM

Focusing primarily on media and arts policy this course examines the growing importance of cultural policy as a site at which a variety of actors – from international organizations, to national governments, from corporations to activists and NGOs – seek to legitimate particular ways of living and the rights and duties of citizenship. The course adopts a triple sited approach as it will consider the interrelatedness of international, national, and local contexts. Students will consider the possibilities and challenges that face intervention into cultural policy processes at these different levels.

Susan Harewood, PhD

Susan Harewood is an Assistant Professor in IAS at the University of Washington Bothell. Her research focuses on communication, popular music, performance, and gender. Her work appears in a number of academic journals and edited collections and examines media and popular culture as sites at which the pursuit of justice is contested, constrained, and shaped.
