This event proposal is oriented around the intersectionality of people’s identities, and the ideas surrounding representation in the mainstream media. For those unfamiliar with the term, intersectionality can be defined as the various overlapping social categorization of identities or “masks” that one may hold within themselves. We want to focus this event around the students, staff, faculty, and administration, and attempt to unpack the complexity of exploring one’s intersectionality while attempting to remain authentic in the process. Many transitioning students utilize their time in college to exploring and navigating through multiple identities, and we want to provide an opportunity for students to feel reassured in the exploration of their own intersectionality.

In order to examine these concepts and engage student participation, we are proposing to bring in Richard Sherman of the Seattle Seahawks to discuss ideas surround representation within the media, and successful ways of constructively dealing with misrepresentations and intersectionality. We chose Richard for multiple reasons, the first of which is he’s a communication scholar from the University of Stanford, and current public figure throughout the greater Seattle area. We feel that Richard would be a perfect candidate to discuss his experiences dealing with media representation, and remaining authentic while navigating the various aspects of his own intersectionality.

We intend to contact Richard via both the Seahawk and his personal blog sites. We are confident in the tools Richard possess to engage the audience, as well has his knowledge and personal experience regarding public perception and misrepresentations. We are also very confident in Richards potential marketability in regards to marketing to our entire student body. This is a great opportunity to welcome Richard to our campus community, and allow him to give back to his new adopted city.

As social justice organizers, we make a conscious effort to engage our fellow students in topics and themes surround social justice and unpacking what exactly that means. For many of us, we may feel emotions of division or exclusion due to the exploration of our own intersectionality. Our goal is to engage student to come together and build comfort, solidarity, and community through dialogues of these nature.

We strive to engage student with mediums that resonate with them on personal levels. The idea of wearing various identity masks throughout our day, and essential our life can be a challenging for many students. We’re attempting to hold a space to encourage solidarity around exploring who you are throughout your entire college experience and beyond.

This event is slated to happen mid to late March, and is intended to be held at Mobius Hall. We intend to again provide a safe-space for student to not only engage with a “professional athlete”, but more so find some solidarity and relation to his story. We will encourage a Q&A following a brief presentation from Richard around his experiences. We will also encourage student to further the discussion on campus, by provide them locations they can utilize as safe-spaces.

In 200 words or less, please do the following:
--Describe the need for this program or service.
--If possible, include any data that might support your proposal (i.e. surveys indicating a need for your initiative).

This program is an opportunity to engage students in concepts surrounding intersectionality. Our goal is to empower students with a feeling of solidarity in exploring their various social charters, and remaining authentic in the process. This is a theme that most, if not all of us experience in our growth and development process. This a common topic that I find many people, including students attempting to unpack in a regular basis.

[Required] Estimate number of students that will benefit from your proposed program/service
