WORKING TOGETHER FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE AND HEALTHY COMMUNITIES

Have you, your family or community had trouble accessing healthcare?

Are you interested in examining the root causes of health inequity?

Do you want to develop your capacity to collaborate with communities, address systemic health challenges and promote social justice?

These systemic health inequities and challenges have existed far too long. There is a critical need for health professionals with the passion, advanced knowledge and applicable skills to dismantle racism and promote social justice.

TAKE ACTION FOR CHANGE

With a Master of Science in Community Health and Social Justice, your passion for change can turn into action. You will join a community of educators and collaborators who believe everyone deserves equal rights and opportunities.

You will learn how to build capacity for health equity and develop culturally-relevant health programming that provides just and equitable solutions.

Emerge as a health professional equipped to build power for health justice and racial equity so that all communities can thrive.

HIGHLIGHTS

• Attend class once per week in hybrid learning model
• Complete degree in 2 years full-time or 4 years part-time
• Network with regional community health partners in hands-on fieldwork
• Prepare to sit for Certified Health Education Specialist (CHES) credential

TAKE THE NEXT STEP

Visit our website, RSVP for a virtual information session, schedule an appointment and apply.

uwb.edu/ms-community-health-social-justice

CONTACT GRADUATE ADVISOR

Celinda Smith  |  cesmith3@uw.edu