Clamor, the UWB Literary and Arts Journal, represents the best of creative culture on campus. While student editors receive credit to produce the journal, Clamor's primary function is to showcase the growing and increasingly vibrant artistic culture of the campus. Clamor is the creative face of the arts at UWB and a forum designed to foster student participation in campus-wide artistic collaboration. The only professional grade arts publication on campus, since 2011 Clamor has expanded from a print journal to include a website, DVD, and art exhibitions on campus and in the community.

[Required] Need for this Program/Service

In 200 words or less, please do the following:

-Describe the need for this program or service.

-If possible, include any data that might support your proposal (i.e. surveys indicating a need for your initiative).

-If you have tracked the success of this program or service in the past, please provide that information here.

Art is the cornerstone of a transformational learning community. Clamor contributes to this UWB core value in three ways: 1. for the campus, Clamor provides a public face for the arts and helps establish UWB's reputation as a site of creativity and innovation; 2. for students and contributors, Clamor provides the only professional-caliber artifact of literary, artistic and multimedia work on campus, and a vital addition to creative, academic and career portfolios; and 3. for student editors, Clamor provides professional publishing, curating and editing experience applicable to a wide range of career and educational opportunities. The S.A.F. committee has historically funded the publication, which in turn has established Clamor as a landmark of creative culture on campus and in the region. At a time of rapid campus growth and expanding interest in the arts, the need for Clamor has never been greater. Clamor provides a unique educational opportunity, fosters cohesive student community, and represents the depth and innovation of creative output on campus.

[Required] Estimate number of students that will benefit from your proposed program/service.

In 200 words or less, please do the following:

-Indicate the benefits of your proposed program for students.

-Estimate how many currently enrolled students will likely benefit from your proposed service or program.

-Estimate the number of any other individuals (and indicate their affiliation) that might benefit from this service or program.

Clamor is an artistic cornerstone of the campus as a whole, directly benefitting every student enrolled by providing a publication forum for creative work at UWB. Clamor prides itself on reaching a large portion of the student body by publishing everything from written and visual art, to sculpture and performing arts, to digital art and graphic design. The varied content benefits students across disciplines, including Computer Science, Nursing, Business, and the Arts. In 2009 there were 2,429 students at UWB, and in 2014 there are 4,605. The growing student population indicates an ever present need for the literary journal, whose readership is clearly growing, evidenced by the quickly disappearing copies of the print journal (800 in 2011, 700 in 2012, 650 in 2013) and the high number of visits to the journal website (over 4,500 visits annually). Contributors to the journal (71 in 2011, 57 in 2012, 67 in 2013) benefit from exposure and professional publication credentials. Student editors (8 in 2011, 9 in 2012, 12 in 2013) gain industry-grade skills in publishing, design, teamwork and professional practice. From readers to contributing authors, hundreds of students have participated in the work of Clamor proving it is an invaluable student service.

[Required] How do you plan to assess the program or service?

How do you plan to track the effects of this program or service?

For example, how would track how the event/program/service went? How would you track how successful it was and what you could change in the future?

The success of the journal is assessed in several ways: by the dedication of student editors who participate; by growing numbers of submissions received; by the caliber of the finished publication; and by the evaluations from enrolled students and the larger UWB community. Our editors are passionate and some have joined the journal specifically because of the high quality of work in past issues. Moreover, there is always a much greater demand for the journal than the budget is able to satisfy, as evidenced by the quickly disappearing copies of the journal, and by the increasing number of students, faculty and community members that attend the launch party each spring (83 people in 2011, 120 in 2012, over 300 in 2013). Last year the Clamor visual art exhibition reached an additional 200 people during the First Thursday Art Walk in Seattle. Last year a petition of support was circulated to the UWB campus which gathered over 600 signatures of students, faculty and staff who believe in the importance and success of the journal. Furthermore, with the MCS major, the major in Interactive Media and Design, and the MFA in Creative Writing and Poetics the importance of the journal is also growing – as a site for creative engagement, as an opportunity for publication, and as an important contribution to campus community. These factors taken together demonstrate an already successful program that will be taken even further in 2014 with the help of the SAF committee.

Additional Information

If needed, please include any other information you feel is relevant to your request. (There is no character limit on this field.)

Clamor represents the very best artistic and literary practices at UWB, helping to foster a sense of creative community while building an artist identity through publication. The high quality journal establishes a literary voice for the UWB campus that competes with the best literary journals across the region. The artistic experience that Clamor provides to its readership expands creative thinking on campus, emphasizing the diverse and dynamic culture of UWB. Those who publish with Clamor benefit from the public presentation of their artistic endeavors to a growing audience. This is a valuable opportunity for career and portfolio development and a chance to get professional recognition from peers. The benefit to those enrolled in the course is the valuable editorial experience and collaborative leadership skills gained through the production and presentation of the journal. Clamor provides experience that prospective employers and graduate schools will find attractive, in terms of hands on skill and the collaborative environment in which editors are engaged.
