PREPARING STUDENTS FOR HEALTH CAREERS

UW Bothell's School of Nursing & Health Studies offers some of the best-ranked nursing and health programs in the country. Our interdisciplinary faculty prepares students for careers in health care through courses based on the highest professional standards — and grounded in social justice and accessibility.

OUR PROGRAMS

Bachelor of Arts in Health Studies

Exploring the social and biological determinants of health, students engage in inquiry and research to improve health outcomes for individuals and communities.

Minors:

- Health Studies
- Health Education & Promotion
- Global Health

Registered Nurse to Bachelor of Science in Nursing Program

The RN-to-BSN program is a one-year hybrid program that focuses on nursing research, leadership and community health.

Master of Nursing

This program, consistently ranked a top program in the nation, is designed to prepare nurses for advanced leadership roles in health care practice, education, administration, community, policy and research settings. Students create their own focus of study by selecting elective courses from across the UW's tri-campus system that support their academic and career goals.

Master of Science in Community Health & Social Justice

Graduates are equipped to dismantle racism, promote social justice, build capacity for health equity and develop culturally relevant health programming. The program also prepares students for certifications in Public Health (CPH) or as a Health Education Specialist (MCHES / CHES).

OUR GUIDING VALUES

- Access to excellence
- Care and respect
- Diversity, equity and inclusion
- Action-oriented social change

ACCESS TO EXCELLENCE

SOCIAL JUSTICE FOCUS

UW Bothell's School of Nursing & Health Studies is committed to advancing social justice in health and nursing through innovative curricula, research and community engagement. Students participate in fieldwork experiences with community partners serving diverse organizations and individuals.

HIGH-IMPACT LEARNING

Students benefit from an expert faculty and a collaborative community of students and partners. Students are placed in leading hospitals, nursing schools and community health agencies for hands-on learning.

TOP RANKED IN THE U.S.

The Master of Nursing program and Bachelor of Science in Nursing have both been ranked among the best nursing programs among public schools across the country.

CCNE AND NCCU ACCREDITED

Nursing programs are accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education and Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities. Curricula are also designed to meet the requirement for students to sit for advanced credentialing as a Certified Nurse Educator or Nurse Executive.

"I consider UW Bothell to be the best educational experience of my life and enthusiastically recommend it to anyone seeking to advance their career and broaden their influence." — Brett Z, Nursing '22
